

A source for The Telegraph is reporting the first bits of dialogue spoken from 007 himself, Daniel Craig and Skyfall's main villain, Silva, played by Javier Bardem. The air is cold and damp on the set, the actor is deep in the bowels of the London Underground, reconstructed on the 007 stage at Pinewood Studios. Daniel Craig limbers up, swaying his hips from side-to-side and stretching his arms across his chest before assuming his starting position, tensing every muscle in his body to become James Bond. As the camera rolls he snaps his Walther PPK up from his hip and locks his target in his sights. "I've got bad news, Silva," he warns. "Me too," comes Javier Bardem's villainous reply. Seconds later a bomb rips through the roof of the tunnel. If you're wondering who Ola Rapace is than just look at the new Skyfall image above, he's the guy on the police motorcycle. Anyways,
