

As any true Batman fan knows, Bruce Wayne is, among many other things, a highly trained martial artist with badass ninja skills. So why, pray tell, does the movie Batman always rely more on body armor and gadgets than on his fighting skills ? Don't get me wrong, I love Christopher Nolan's Batman trilogy, but his Batman is depicted as more of a boxer/brawler than a true martial artist. When are we going to see a live-action Batman perform more like his comic book counterpart, jumping, punching, kicking, and flipping his way into combat, relying more on his speed, strength and agility to win a fight than on his Bat-suit and gadgets? Well, apparently I'm not the only one dying to see Batman in action the way Batman is supposed to look in action because actor, stunt man, MMA trainer and real-life ninja Eric Gable — first profiled

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/BrentSprecher/news/?a=66356>