

Duncan Jones will follow up Warcraft with a noir-ish sci-fi thriller set in futuristic Berlin, Mute. The story follows a bartender (Alexander Skarsgård) who teams up with a pair of surgeons (Paul Rudd and Justin Theroux) to track down his missing girlfriend. Mute is the second part of Jones' trilogy which kicked-off with Moon, and is apparently set in the same universe. There's a definite Blade Runner vibe from these first images, which you can check out below along with the synopsis. Set in the near-future, Leo (Alexander Skarsgård) is a bartender living in the pulsing city of Berlin. Because of a childhood accident, Leo lost the ability to speak and the only good thing in his life is his beautiful girlfriend Naadirah (Seyneb Saleh). When she vanishes without a trace, Leo's search for her takes him deep into the city's seedy underbelly. A pair of wise-cracking American surgeons (Paul Rudd and Justin Theroux) are the only recurring clue and Leo is forced

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/sci-fi/first-official-look-at-alexander-skarsgrd-paul-rudd-and-justin-theroux-in-a147969>