

They hated it is the short version. I wasn't too enthusiastic myself after the trailers and the fact that it was directed by the man that inflicted Pathfinder on us but apparently it's even worse than anticipated. Here are some excerpts from the Playlist's review.. ..Let's start with Momoa. We'd had some hope after his turn on "Game of Thrones" that the actor might at least stand out in the film, forgetting that he only spoke half-a-dozen words of English across ten episodes. He's fine at the sword-slinging, but delivery of dialogue? Not so much. And the rest of the cast aren't much better: Lang is on sneering villainous autopilot, reprising his "Avatar" turn with an unplaceable accent, while Rachel Nichols fails to give any personality to what is, in fairness, a role that's not so much underwritten as never-written. Worst of all is Rose McGowan, made up to look like

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/rorreviews/news/?a=44398&t=First_Review_For_iConan_The_Barbarian_Hits