

It's been heavily rumored that classic DC Comics villain Catwoman won't be a part of Ben Affleck's next directorial venture, The Batman, but that doesn't mean there aren't plenty of talented actresses interested in taking on the role whenever it inevitably makes its way back to the big screen. The latest to enter the ring is Nina Dobrev, who is best known for her former lead role on the The Vampire Diaries where she starred as the doppelgängers Elena Gilbert & Katherine Pierce. Dobrev, who is currently on the worldwide press tour for Paramount's eagerly-awaited action sequel xXx: The Return of Xander Cage, was recently asked by the Brazilian entertainment site CinePOP, whether she'd ever be interested in signing on for a superhero movie and well, unsurprisingly, she said of course, but unfortunately her first choice was already taken: "I think it would've been really fun to play Wonder Woman, but that movie's already been made." However, when further pressed on the matter and if there

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/catwoman/former-vampire-diaries-star-nina-dobrev-says-shed-be-up-to-play-catwoman-a147257>