

Yesterday, it was revealed by a very reliable source that Black Panther will be getting his own big screen adaptation. For years, the character has been up there alongside Doctor Strange as one of the most anticipated films from Marvel Studios and the news that it was closer than ever to becoming a reality has left comic book lovers very happy indeed. However, with the likes of Captain America, Iron Man and Thor all starring in their own movies, do we really need a Black Panther movie?! Well, yes, and here are just a handful of reasons why. Location, Location, Location... Much like Asgard transported fans to a new and exciting location, Wakanda can most definitely do the same with the fictional city which is a mixture of African architecture and ultra-modern technology. With just about all of Marvel's movies rooted firmly in the United States, this would be a bold new

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=61114>