

Seems like Fox News has rounded up some critics that accuse DC Comics relaunch of being too sexually charged. Even the violence has crossed the line into a darker realm. And these professional child psychologist warn that overexposure to images of blood, sex and violence will encourage young children to become much more aggressive. I'm rolling my eyes as much as possible with this bull crap. Since I was younger I've heard about this nonsense. Do these psychologists really think cable television or the internet do not exist? I mean really! Come on! A child can turn on HBO nowadays and see all the sex and violence they like with full on nudity. But if a comic book suggest sex it will be the straw that broke the camels back? Get Real. As an example of people bitching and moaning for decades about violence and believing children will become lords of
