

It was first reported that story was meant as just a web series, but Frank Darabont says that isn't true. The storyline for the few of you that don't know was to be a prequel and follow the soldiers as Atlanta is under attack by the zombies. Sam Witwer the star of Being Human was to reprise his role and you would see how he ended up a zombie in the tank. This was what they call a "wild card" episode in the business. Throw the viewer a little of course, but reward them with something completely unexpected. Frank says he respected the show "Lost" for using that technique, and had planned to add that type of show once a season if he had stayed on with The Walking Dead. He also said he always had plans to use that storyline, and that is why he hired Sam for a role that
