

Frank Miller is a comic book writer and artist fans either seem to love or hate, but for the most part, there's no denying that he's delivered some incredible work when it comes to the world of Batman. His influence was felt in Christopher Nolan's The Dark Knight Trilogy and in Batman v Superman: Dawn of Justice this year, but what would he like to see in Ben Affleck's upcoming take on the Caped Crusader? "My dream would be to make it much smaller," Miller explained in a recent interview with Variety. "To lose the toys and to focus more on the mission, and to use the city a great deal more. Because he's got a loving relationship with the city he's protecting. And unlike Superman his connection to crime is intimate; it has been ever since his parents were murdered. And he defeats criminals with his hands. So it would be a different take. But it will never be in my

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/batman/frank-miller-says-ben-afflecks-batman-movie-needs-to-lose-the-toys-focus-a146381>