

Despite some misleading and inaccurate reports that Tom Hiddleston told the audience at Kapow! Comic Con in London that he wouldn't be in The Avengers (I was there, he didn't - read CBM's full report of the Q&A HERE) it's believed by most that we'll see Loki come to blows with the superhero team. However, equally rumored are the alien baddies, the Kree and Skrulls. Now, our friends over at Spinoff Online have a theory which they believe is yet another indication that we'll see some sort of adaptation of the classic Kree-Skrull War. Here's a brief excerpt of what they had to say. You can read more by following the link below. And now Upper Deck has announced The Avengers: Kree-Skrull War, a 190-card set that can be assembled to tell five original comic stories centering on the classic storyline from The Avengers #89-97. As ICv2.com notes, the July set will

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/joshw24/news/?a=35526&t=Further_Indications_That_The_Skrulls_And_Kree_Will_Villainize_iThe_Avengersi