

After FX decided not to pick up Powers after a pilot was shot last year, the future of the small screen adaptation of the Brian Michael Bendis and Michael Avon Oeming comic book has remained unclear. Earlier this week, reliable sources indicated that there was still a future for the show, something now confirmed by IGN TV at the Television Critics Association press tour. FX President John Landgraf had this to say about a Tweet from Bendis earlier this week in which he revealed that he had read a script for the THIRD episode of the show. "Yeah. Brian has the benefit of reading scripts that I haven't read! But what we ended up doing is hiring Chic Eglee, who had done the work on the pilot we shot. Not only to rewrite the pilot that we had shot, but to do three more episodes and put together a writing staff.

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=64726>