

If that behind-the-scenes wrap video was anything to go by, it looks like the cast of Zack Snyder's Justice League had a fantastic time on the set of the upcoming superhero team-up film. Gal Gadot (Wonder Woman) was no exception it seems, and in an interview with HeyUGuys promoting her upcoming film Keeping Up with the Joneses, Gadot expressed her enjoyment of being able to work with so many different personalities. "They're all different and great, you know working with such a big cast and having so many different personalities on set every day, it was super interesting. They're lovely people." When pressed by her co-star Jon Hamm about who her favorite was, Gadot went on to say that each actor had a way of embodying their respective character in real life. "It's funny because each and every one of them is their character in a weird way. Henry is super, you know he has this good will and is polished and pure. Ben is more
