

With the announcement that Warner Brothers had officially and finally given the live action remake of Akira the green light, things really seem to be moving forward at quite a pace. The latest news was that Garret Hedlund was the front runner to play Kaneda, and now Twitch Film are reporting: Twitch has learned that Gary Oldman has been offered the role of Colonel while Helena Bonham-Carter has been offered Lady Miyako. We must bare in mind that they have only been offered the roles, and they haven't been officially accepted. What do you think of this casting? Does Akira need a live action remake?
