

In an interview with Moviefone the fan favorite actor who has portrayed Police Commissioner Jim Gordon brilliantly in both of Christopher Nolan's previous Bat flicks speaks about winding up the trilogy. He reveals how he feels, and how Jim himself would probably feel, now that it's all coming to an end. He also gives fans an idea on what to expect from the movie but much of it is stuff we have heard in previous interviews. He does say that even though Gordon has "cleaned up Gotham with the Harvey Dent Act, it's seething underneath" and all hell is about to break loose. Oh and he has seen, and liked that SNL skit with Steve Buscemi. MF: When people walk out of the theater, what will they be thinking? GO: It's great. It's a terrific conclusion to the trilogy. Nolan rounds it off: he brings in a bit of the first

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/rorschachsrrants/news/?a=50766&t=Gary_Oldman_On_How_He_Feels_About_Retiring_Jim_Gordon_In_THE_DARK_KNIGHT_RISES