

Talking to Newsarama about "The Curse of Shazam!", a new monthly 10 page back-up story which will appear in Justice League, Geoff Johns has revealed that despite there being little news on the long talked about movie adaptation, there's still hope for Shazam. Below is a brief excerpt from the interview, but you can read it in full by clicking the link below (Many thanks to @AntoBlueberry for the heads up). You've been working on producing and co-writing a Shazam movie. Is this comic book story at all related to the work you've done on the film? Not really. It's got some elements that I pitched in there, and some of the same characters, obviously, because the characters cross over. Tonally, it's probably pretty close. We haven't heard much about the film project lately. Is it dead, or is there still a possibility this could be a film? Oh, no, Shazam's always — there's always

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=53531&t=Geoff_Johns_Says_That_Theres_Still_Hope_For_SHAZAM_Movie