

Talking to MTV Splash Page, Gerard Butler has addressed the recent rumors that he'll be back for a role (perhaps as one as small as a cameo) in the planned sequel to 300. The first movie was loved by critics and fans alike, and it seems that they're not the only ones hoping the movie will live up to the quality of the first. Here is the video interview and transcription courtesy of the site. Get More: Movie Trailers, Movies Blog "You know more than I do. I'm like, 'Oh there's a director now?' I've heard that I'm in the script. I've heard things, I've seen things, I've flown off the moon. That was my way of avoiding [the question]!" "I honestly don't know what's going on. I have to see a script and talk with them more. I would love to get involved again, but it has to be something special. Because '300'

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/joshw24/news/?a=46390&t=Gerard Butler Reveals His Involvement And Knowledge Of A i300i Sequel