According to Today's Zaman, actor Nicolas Cage was spotted in Cappadocia, Turkey filming the final scenes of his return as the Brimstone Biker, Johnny Blaze in Ghost Rider: Spirit Of of Vengeance. While the shoot hasn't been getting much media attention, it sure did catch attention from locals in Europe, where the shoot occurred. Anyhow, the site states verbatim: "The famous actor walked to his car through the valley following filming at the Zelve Open-air Museum. Cage seemed exhausted and was covered in sweat and dust. (pictured left) Responding to a reporter's question, Cage said that he liked Cappadocia. He later headed to the hotel where he has been staying with his wife and child. The shooting of the movie ends today." The sequel follows Johnny Blaze, as hes hiding out in remote Eastern Europe and struggling to repress his curse. Blaze is then recruited by a sect to take on the devil,
