

What new things were you able to add to Ghost Rider this time? Nicolas Cage: I was thinking about trying to find something really weird, which would be like levitating in circles. We called it “the compass” together, to mess with how he would attack his enemies. And then, I looked up in the dictionary, and the word weird literally means ‘to turn around,’ so I thought that was an interesting thing. But it was like trying to design a body language from another dimension. We worked in a room together and looked at different animals – like cobras and insects, and tried to find ways of moving that would hopefully scare you and entertain you. Who is your character in the film? Idris Elba: In the history of the comic there’s a character that keeps coming up called Moreau, and he never really takes on the same form, he does a different type
