

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/Dustin03Comics/news/?a=29300&t=Ghostbusters_3_Status_Update

Its starting to seem less likely each day that the anticipated spring start date for 'Ghostbusters 3', wont be happening, and now the films writer Lee Eisenberg and it's producer Joe Medjuck give us some insight on the films status. So far Sony Pictures, Harold Ramis, Dan Ackroyd and Ivan Reitman have already signed-off on the much revised Lee Eisenberg and Gene Stupnitsky screenplay, and as of right now, the only thing keeping production at a stand still, is Bill Murray. And it should be noted that Bill Murray is one of the five rights holders to the 'Ghostbusters' franchise, so without him, this film doesn't happen. Here's what Eisenerg had to say: "Right now, we have a script we haven't worked on probably in a couple of months, and we're waiting for Bill Murray to read it. People seem excited about it, and the studio seems high on it. ... We're very proud