

G.I. JOE: RETALIATION Dwayne Johnson, Adrienne Palicki and D.J. Cotrona give interviews to ET's Christina McLarty with snippets of footage for the upcoming movie. A movie that has to be darn good if it has any chance to erase the previous atrocity directed by Stephen Sommers. They are off to a great start with even better cast than the last film, by holding on to key actors, while replenishing the Joe's with star power like The Rock and Bruce Willis. "He's a BAMF," Johnson says about his character Roadblock in the film. "Roadblock is a BAMF -- a bad a mother f," he jokes. Johnson also talks about his close working relationship with action legend Bruce Willis, who plays Joe Colton in the film, the creator of the G.I. Joes. "Bruce is the man," he reveals. "We've been buddies for some time now. ... He's iconic in our business on many levels." But just how close
