

Although Marvel has begun to turn to some of their more obscure properties for both their big screen and TV projects, one second tier character that's yet to make the cut is Moon Knight. Though we do continue to hear rumors of something brewing for Netflix, nothing official has come from the studio, so we have to assume that there are no current plans in the works. Still, many fans continue to hold out hope that something will materialize, and as it turns out, Guardians of the Galaxy Vol. 2 director James Gunn counts himself among them. Oh my God I love Moon Knight & I have a great idea for a movie, I just wish I had the time (but, no, he doesn't belong in Guardians). <https://t.co/ARJCPh62gt> — James Gunn (@JamesGunn) January 4, 2017 Though it's highly unlikely we'll ever see Marc Spector join Gunn's team of intergalactic A-holes, perhaps the fact that he's brought his idea to Marvel means they'll finally think

Read more: https://www.comicbookmovie.com/guardians_of_the_galaxy/gotg-vol-2-director-james-gunn-reveals-that-he-pitched-an-a147896