

As announced at Comic-Con and showcased via concept art, Marvel Studios' live-action Guardians of the Galaxy adaptation will focus on the superhero team's 2008 incarnation. This is likely due to the reboot, penned by Dan Abnett and Andy Lanning, being considered more “modernized” than the 1969 original 31st-Century lineup. In learning that Marvel Studios was adding the interstellar heroes to their cinematic universe, Andy Lanning offered Newsarama a statement on behalf of Abnett and himself. Expressing their excitement, while thanking others involved in addition to commenting on whether they're involved with the film, the statement reads: “Dan and I are really excited to see the Guardians of the Galaxy make it to the big screen, especially as it would appear to be the iteration of the team established during our run on the title. We will be eager to see the film along with all the fans of cosmic

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=65656>