

On the last episode of Meet the Movie Press, host Simon Thompson revealed that upcoming guest Lin-Manuel Miranda (Hamilton) tells him that he would like to play Spider-Man symbiote villain, Carnage. Thompson reports: "He (Miranda) is a big fan of Marvel. And there is one particular character that he would actually like to play. It's Carnage. He said if Disney and Marvel were looking at doing a Maximum Carnage movie or bringing Carnage in (the MCU) as a character, he wants to be Carnage. Genuinely as a fan, he would love to play Carnage. That's a goal of his." The Disney connection is definitely there as Lin-Manuel recently starred in their upcoming animated pic, Moana and will co-star in the studio's upcoming Marry Poppins remake. While he doesn't exactly fit the bill of most comic book reader expectations for Cletus Kasady, Marvel has proven that their sometimes willing to go the opposite direction with their casting selection. After Tom Holland fights Vulture (and maybe

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/spider-man/hamilton-creator-and-former-star-li-n-manuel-wants-to-bring-carnage-to-a146960>