

"Heck, this is my overjoyed expression! You should see me when I'm really unhappy"--HAPPY HOGAN --> Comic Book History Who is HAPPY HOGAN? Happy whose real name is Harold Hogan, is a Marvel Comics supporting character mostly appearing in Iron Man books. He first appeared in Tales of Suspense #45 (September 1963). Stan Lee and Don Heck created the character. First Appearance HAPPY HOGAN became a chauffeur and personal assistant of Tony Stark when he saved his life in a car accident. Happy was a former boxer with a history of losing his fights, it was his sad-faced demeanor in the ring that earned Harold the nickname of 'Happy' Hogan. His most notable opponent was Battlin' Jack Murdock, who is the father of Matt Murdock, Daredevil. Happy retired saying he was getting 'too good at losing'; in fact, his nice guy attitude often cost him when it came to trying to knock out an opponent. Tony

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/pollmaster/news/?a=40876&t=HAPPY_HOGAN_The_Freak_bio