

Back in March, it was revealed that prequels and sequels for the 80s sci-fi classic Blade Runner (which was set in 2019 and followed ex-cop Rick Deckard, who was played by Harrison Ford, whose job was to relieve 'replicants') were in the works. Many wondered if the film's star, Ford, was going to return, and the actor behind Rick Deckard has officially addressed the very question in a recent interview with MTV. "I have no idea at this point," he said about taking part in any film. "It's very early on. I know some of the people involved." Get More: Movie Trailers, Movies Blog Also back in March, Warner Bros. producers Broderick Johnson and Andrew A. Kosove were quoted by Movieweb as stating the following about the project: Our friend Christopher Nolan who we did Insomnia [with] would be the pie in the sky for us. To be clear I think what Christopher Nolan

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/BatFreak/news/?a=42097&t=Harrison_Ford_Briefly_Talks_About_Returning_For_Future_IBlade_Runner_Films