

While many people either love or hate the franchise (both in regards to the books and movies) there's no denying that Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows Part 2 was a great movie. But was it really good enough to be considered for a "Best Picture" nod at the Oscars? Well, Warner Bros. certainly seems to think so as they've release a promotional "For Your Consideration" video as well as a list of the categories they believe the movie should receive nominations in. Daniel Radcliffe and Rupert Grint up for "Best Actor"? Yeah, I don't see that happening somehow... Best Picture Produced by: David Heyman David Barron J. K. Rowling Best Director David Yates Best Adapted Screenplay Steve Kloves Best Actor Daniel Radcliffe (Harry Potter) Rupert Grint (Ron Weasley) Best Supporting Actor Robbie Coltrane (Hagrid) Ralph Fiennes (Voldemort) Michael Gambon (Dumbledore) John Hurt (Ollivander) Matthew Lewis (Neville Longbottom) Gary Oldman (Sirius Black) Alan Rickman (Severus Snape) David Thewlis (Remus Lupin) Best Actress Emma Watson (Hermione Granger) Best Supporting Actress Helena Bonham Carter (Bellatrix Lestrange) Maggie Smith (Professor

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/joshw24/news/?a=49440&t=iHarry_Potter_And_The_Deathly_Hallows_Part_2i_For_Your_Consideration_Oscar_Promo