

Variety report that Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows is already gaining huge momentum at the box office, and will completely crush comic book movie The Dark Knight's takings over the weekend in the US. While it's not a huge shock that the movie is doing this well, how do you think these record breaking figures might affect Captain America: The First Avenger next week? Be sure to share your thoughts on that in the usual place, and here is an excerpt from the sites report. The heck with Voldemort: Harry Potter's about to take down Batman. As of 1 p.m. Pacific time Friday, "Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows: Part 2" had already collected $19.3 million in dayside domestic receipts (including pre-sales), running briskly ahead of three-day box office champ "The Dark Knight," which had collected $12.4 million at that same point in 2008. If "Part 2" keeps that pace through

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/joshw24/news/?a=41868&t=iHarry\_Potter\_And\_The\_Deathly\_Hallows\_Part\_2i\_Looks\_Set\_To\_Crush\_iThe\_Dark\_Knighti