

HitFix have exclusively revealed that Warner Bros. are, "in the process of finalizing the deals for David Yates and Steve Kloves to re-team for a multi-movie version of Stephen King's epic "The Stand." With the recent critical acclaim for the final Harry Potter movie (including some talk about a "Best Picture" Oscar nomination) it's doesn't exactly come as a surprise that WB would want to get the duo back together again. A novel by Stephen King, recently adapted into numerous comic book series', it takes place in a post apocalyptic world which sees 99.4% of the world's human population wiped out following the spread of a human-made biological weapon. The book deals with this and the aftermath of these events.

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/joshw24/news/?a=44122&t=iHarry Potteri Team David Yates And Steve Kloves Set To Take On iThe Standi