

This movie just can't seem to get a break. First Darren Aronofsky, a director anyone that knows anything about movies would have killed to see direct a CBM, was forced to walk away from the project. A decent replacement was found in Walk The Line's James Mangold but then shooting was put back to "early 2012". Well now that may be delayed even further. From Clint at Moviehole.. I spoke to someone who had recently met with director James Mangold about mixing it up with that particular hairball on the big screen, and he/she has been told that due to some problems on the Japan side (not quite sure what; politics, red-tape and ill-fated "Grudge" remakes may have something to do with the dent in the relations there) the film has been delayed. Again. They'll resume talks again next year. I don't know when the film will happen, but I believe it will

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/roorschachsrrants/news/?a=50441&t=Has_iThe_Wolverinei_Been_Delayed_Yet_Again