

On How He Ended Up Landing The Role: "There's nothing intentional about my job choices it's just what jobs I get offered. I often hear about people saying, 'Oh, you know, so and so's choice' and this or that. I think once you get to a certain level of notoriety and fame where you can open a movie then yes, you are offered scripts and stories and get to choose. It's not like I went on Tudors and said, 'Ok, next I'm going to play a hero for my campaign for Superman,' it just all happened to happen as it is." On Whether He Would Answer Questions In A Kansas Accent: "I shall not." On How He Plans On Approaching Superman: "I think on Superman it will be slightly different because I've approached it with the experience of Immortals and I've said, 'Look, guys, I'm going to need recovery time and I'm going to need

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/joshw24/news/?a=34891&t=Henry_Cavill_On_His_Approach_To_iSuperman_iAnd_Playing_A_British_Man_Of_Steel