

While speaking to Cineplex Magazine about his newest film The Cold Light of Day, Henry Cavill was asked about his upcoming role as Superman in Zack Snyder's Man of Steel, which is set to be released next year. When asked about getting the role of Superman, Henry Cavill told the magazine about his whereabouts when Zack Snyder decided to let him know that he would play the lead role. "There's no better feeling than to get that call. Actually, I was at home when the phone rang. It was an unknown number and I ignored it, then looked down and saw it was Zack Snyder. I was like 'Oh my God!' and he'd hung up at that stage. Fortunately, he called back." He also discussed the importance of doing Superman's character justice, as quite a number of fans have disliked the most recent interpretations of the character from 2006's Superman Returns (played by Brandon

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/TheAlexLynch/news/?a=66712>