

In this new interview with Henry Cavill he talks about what it was like landing the role in Zack Snyder's 'Man of Steel'. He also goes into detail about his reasoning for passing up the same role 5 years ago in 'Superman Returns' which he declined because at the time he felt he couldn't do the character justice. "As much as I wanted it at a younger age, you get to a certain point where you go, "OK, I'm ready for most things now." Back then, you believe you're ready for it. But as soon as it happens, you think that it's a little heavy. I'm glad it's happening now as opposed to any other time." "I got the phone call, then ran round the house screaming for 20 minutes, then sat down and thought, "Wow, I'm Superman. That's insane". It took me a good long time to get used to the idea. I'm

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/Dustin03Comics/news/?a=35273&t=Henry_Cavill_Talks_About_Landing_Superman_And_Passing_Up_The_Role_In_2006