

We've featured deviantART user SkinnyGlasses's work here on CBM quite a few times in the past, although this particular manip caught my eye while browsing through his impressive library of work tonight. While it's a fairly simple idea, the extremely convincing still pits two of Marvel's most iconic characters against one another. If Ewan McGregor had actually been cast as Henry Pym/Ant-Man and Ultron had been confirmed as the villain in the Joss Whedon helmed sequel, then it wouldn't be at all hard to imagine that many would assume this is official! What do you guys think? Is this a scenario that you would like to see in the follow-up to this year's critically acclaimed billion dollar blockbuster? Sound off with your thoughts in the usual place and be sure to check out more of SkinnyGlasses's work by clicking the link at the bottom of the page.

Marvel Studios presents in association

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=66661>