

Spider-Man: Homecoming finished shooting a while ago, but we've yet to see so much as a single official image from the Jon Watts helmed reboot. Well, that could be about to change as ComicBook.com reports that sources close to the production have told them the first trailer will be attached to Rogue One: A Star Wars Story. That makes sense considering the fact that it's Disney last big 2016 release, and you have to imagine that it will be online sometime before December 16th. No further details were provided by the site, but we'll no doubt hear something definite about this soon (especially as it should be classified at some point in the next few weeks if this story is accurate). Spider-Man: Homecoming is set to be released next July, so a first look in December does make sense. It's long overdue at this stage, but it will be interesting to see whether or not the full-length Guardians of the Galaxy Vol. 2 trailer

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/spider-man/heres-when-well-see-the-first-trailer-for-spider-man-homecoming-a146871>