

Kong: Skull Island looks set to be one of 2017's most exciting releases, especially now we know that a movie pitting King Kong against Godzilla is in the works. A glimpse of the iconic monster has already been revealed in the teaser trailer, but Entertainment Weekly has today unveiled a first look at him. "That sequence comes from a point in the movie where you're not quite sure who Kong is, what his purpose is, how people should be perceiving him," Jordan Vogt-Roberts explains. "Through the folly of man, where our initial instinct is to attack anything that is not a known quantity, both sides jump the gun, Kong and the humans, and it kicks off a relatively messy engagement. At first, of course you're going to perceive something like that as a terrible threat and monster — the physicality of him alone." Interestingly, the filmmaker then went on to take a shot at Godzilla helmer Gareth Edwards. "Well, the reveal you can wait for

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/sci-fi/heres-your-first-look-at-the-titular-monster-in-kong-skull-island-a146677>