

Deadline reports that when producer Howard Gordon was asked about the on-again, off-again big screen version of 24, he remained fairly vague and far less certain than Kiefer Sutherland (who recently said that it will begin shooting as soon as filming wraps on the second season of Touch). Gordon told those in attendance at the TCA panel for Homeland the following. "My understanding of that is, having gone quiet in a way that I didn't think boded well for that, there's been some stirrings recently, so I think it's something everyone's gunning for." However, while the fate of the film remains unclear for now, but the producer did say that he will be involved with the film. "As far as whether my work on [Homeland] will impede that — not at all. There's a script that's been written, and I think the issues now are more about the director's schedule and

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=64985>