

The following statement from Steven Moffat should set Who fan's minds at ease. There was a bit of a kerfuffle on CBM when it was announced that a movie was in the works but that it would bare no relation to the much loved Tv series and cast a new Dr etc. Well according to Moffat that is not the case. Any movie would star the BBC's Dr (currently Matt Smith) and run in tandem with that show.. “To clarify: any Doctor Who movie would be made by the BBC team, star the current TV Doctor and certainly NOT be a Hollywood reboot. David Yates, great director, was speaking off the cuff, on a red carpet. [Doctor Who] is a vitally important BBC brand with a huge international audience [that] not even Hollywood can start from scratch. There simply are no developed plans for a Doctor Who movie at the moment. If

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/rorschachsranst/news/?a=50586&t=IF_There_Is_A_DOCTOR_WHO_Movie_It_Will_Be_In_Continuity_With_The_TV_Series