

Readying for tomorrow's filming in Cleveland, Ohio, where East Ninth Street has been altered to mock New York City's busy 42nd Street, the production crew for Marvel Studios' The Avengers were filming on-location of The Big Apple today. The crew have been spotted at the actual 42nd street of NYC, inside the Grand Central Terminal station. While the images, courtesy of a few "New Yorkers" and a crew member, depict the camera & lighting set-up and dozens of extras, the scenes apparently depict "New Yorkers" fleeing the terminal station, evidently escaping a disaster. And that at some point during the sequence, someone or something will either fly, or be thrown through the "rigged" windows. What's quite interesting is that, among the many "NYC" props on Cleveland set, theres signage for an entrance to the Grand Central Station. So we can assume that

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/MarvelFreshman/news/?a=44391&t=Images_Vague_Details_For_iThe_Avengersi_Shoot_In_New_Yorks_Grand_Central_Terminal