

Jared Leto didn't seem at all happy about how his performance in Suicide Squad was chopped down to pretty much nothing, but could he still be open to returning to the DC Films Universe? Well, speculation is running rampant on social media tonight as the actor has shared some very, very intriguing images via Snapchat. As you can see, the first is the iconic cover of Batman: The Killing Joke. The second meanwhile is a tooth which is being stored within a Joker themed purple and gold case. What exactly these mean is hard to say, but they're clearly related to the Clown Prince of Crime! Could it be that Leto has signed on to reprise the role of the iconic villain in The Batman or Gotham City Sirens? Perhaps, though it's worth noting that it wasn't too long ago we heard some rumblings of the actor showing up in Justice League this November. Share your theories in the comments section below.

Read more: <https://www.comicbookmovie.com/batman/is-jared-let-teasing-a-return-for-his-take-on-the-joker-in-the-dc-films-a148283>