

On numerous occasion Daniel Craig has said that he'd like James Bond to have a softer side, and wanted to show more emotional depth. Sounds like Daniel got what he wanted as sources for The Daily Express and The Sun are reporting that Sam Mendes is cutting down on the action to make a more character driven Bond film. Is the world ready for a James Bond movie that is filled with dialogue? Also from The Sun is that Daniel Craig will be sporting a beard. Making him the first Bond since Pierce Brosnan with a hairy face on screen. Brosnan wore the extra coat because he was a prisoner in Die Another Day. One source said: "There are growing rumours Sam Mendes is cutting out the action scenes and making it Oscar-friendly." Insiders maintain that "action scenes in India have all been axed" though scenes in Istanbul and Duntrune Castle in
