

According to a new report, it seems that Marvel's Inhumans television series will begin shooting in about two months. Production Weekly registered in its weekly report that the show start its production in March, with shooting to take place in Chicago and Los Angeles. Inhumans will premiere on September 26, but before that, on September 1, the first two episodes will be shown in IMAX theaters in the US. The series will consist of eight episodes which ABC plan to broadcast every Tuesday with no interruptions. The story will not be an Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D spin-off which first introduced the Inhumans to TV. What we know about the plot so far is that the series will take place in modern days as we follow the Inhuman Royal Family, which will feature characters such as Black Bolt, Medusa and Gorgon. The show will have scenes on Earth as well as on the Moon, the latter being the location of the Inhuman city Attilan. Created by Stan
