

Photos & Info Courtesy of mi6-hq.com The website mi6-hq.com has come across some interesting information, as it appears as though Sam Mendes has turned the Ascot Racecourse's new state of the art grandstand into the Shanghai International Airport. As you can see with the image to the right, Shanghai signage has been added to the location. The scenes were filmed at night according to the site's source to keep the racetrack out of the shots, and over 300 Chinese extras were used to create authenticity. Also of note, mi6-hq.com is reporting that a large amount of VW Beetles have been scooped up for the film. It is expected that they'll be damaged for a stunt and production will need replacements. The image above is of the Racecourse, and below is an image of the Shanghai Airport In an odd piece of news, rumorfix.com is reporting that there is something special going on with
