

James Gunn took to Facebook earlier today to show off yet another alien from Guardians of the Galaxy Vol. 2, and he's a character who the filmmaker identifies as Brahl. Played by Super's Stephen Blackheart, I believe he may be one of the Ravagers who we got to see revealed a little earlier this year, but this is a new shot of the character which shows off just how much work went into creating his look. As Comic Book Resources point out, Brahl hails from Achernon and first appeared in the pages of Thor Annual #6 in 1977. A member of the Minions of Menace, he can become intangible and wields energy blasts which has the same effect on those he targets. In more recent years, he's been established as an enemy to the Guardians, so it makes sense that Gunn has decided to include him in the Ravagers. Happy Birthday to my very best pal in all the land and my only friend who
