

Though Deadline broke the story, director James Mangold has now confirmed that Logan will have its world premiere almost a month before it goes on general release when it screens out of competition as part of the Berlin International Film Festival, which is scheduled to take place February 9 through 18. The first 40 minutes of the film already screened recently to a very positive response, and by all accounts Hugh Jackman's final (well, unless Ryan Reynolds can convince him to return) appearance as the iconic mutant is going to be something very special. No doubt we'll be hearing more detailed reports following its premiere in Berlin next month. Logan is set to claw its way into theaters on March 3.
