

Talking to Red Carpet News at yesterday's Jameson Empire Awards, James McAvoy has talked a little more about returning as Charles Xavier in X-Men: First Class 2 and his chemistry (bromance?) with Michael Fassbender. However, despite recent rumours that production would begin on the sequel this Fall, the actor says he has "no idea" when he'll begin working on the highly anticipated follow up to the critically acclaimed 2011 hit. On What He'd Like To See In The Upcoming Sequel: "God knows. Hopefully more of that same in that we don't stick to the same sort of routine. You know? I think what was good about the first X-Men: First Class movie is that we messed with the dynamic that you usually get with X-Men movies. I think we need to keep doing that. We can't just fall into stride with the other stuff. So, maybe, hopefully more of that I think. On

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JoshWildingNewsAndReviews/news/?a=56992>