

In an in-depth interview with Collider about The Muppets (click on the link below to check it out) the comedic actor revealed that there's one more thing he'd love to do in future...play a super villain in a comic book movie! Is there anything left you would like to do? I'd like to be President of The United States. [laughs] No, I'd like to play the villain in a superhero movie. I think I'd be really good at it. I'm like 20% creepy. [laughter] No, I really am. I have 20% creepy. I exclude it from this movie. But look, when you watch Sarah Marshall, the Dracula musical is funny, but it's 20% creepy. So I really want to play a villain in a superhero movie. While Segel may have been saying the above quite jokingly, are there any comic book movie roles in particular that you think he'd be well suited to?
