

A while ago there were rumors that Warner Brothers had went ahead and gave the green light to pursue a sequel to its Summer movie, Green Lantern. Almost as quickly as those rumors surfaced they were debunked. Jeff Robinov, film group president for WB, chatted recently with The LA Times in an article they did about the possibility of hero fatigue dooming superhero movies financially where he said the sequel has not gotten the go ahead, but they do have an outline for the film. Robinov also said he would like to see the film be a little more darker and edgier with more emphasis on action. From The LA Times: "I don't believe there is superhero fatigue," said Jeff Robinov, film group president for Warner Bros., the studio behind Green Lantern. "Every year there are half a dozen or more horror films and comedies. Superheroes have become a genre of their own

Read more: http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/JakeLester/news/?a=43278&t=Jeff_Robinov_Comments_On_iGreen_Lanterns_Possible_Sequel