

Last week it was reported that model newcomer Zoe Aggeliki was a sure thing for the role of Johanna Mason in the Hunger Games sequel "Catching Fire", but now THR reports that it's actually Jena Malone (Donnie Darko, Sucker Punch) who will play the ruthless and deadly ex-tribute/Hunger Games winner. The part was apparently a very highly sought after one, as Johanna Mason is a very popular character and plays a prominent role in both Hunger Games sequel novels. The Hunger Games: Catching Fire will be directed by Francis Lawrence and is scheduled for release November 22, 2013. There is no official synopsis for the movie yet but here's a quick rundown of the novel's plot.. Catching Fire is a young adult novel by American novelist Suzanne Collins, the second book in The Hunger Games trilogy. As the sequel to the 2008 bestseller The Hunger Games, it continues the story of Katniss Everdeen
