

Wondering when a sequel to X-Men: First Class begins shooting? Well, according to THR, Fox's highly anticipated sequel to it's surprise Summer 2011 hit will begin shooting this fall. The problem? Star Jennifer Lawrence, who portrayed Mystique, is also scheduled to begin shooting a sequel to Hunger Games this summer and will likely continue filming through the fall. At first glance, you'd think Lawrence would give preference to Lionsgate's Hunger Games over an X-Men:First Class sequel as she's the lead in that film but THR reports that, "Fox will win [any conflict]," according to their insider sources. "Their option trumps Lionsgate's option." Their insiders also say that the studios "are poised to face-off over the 21- year-old's schedule as they move ahead with sequels in their respective franchises." Lionsgate currently has Catching Fire planned to shoot this summer for a November 2013 release, whereas Fox does not yet have a release date

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GraphicCity/news/?a=56442>