

Many here at CBM have expressed concerns about how well The Avengers:Earth's Mightiest Heroes has been fairing. Air date and time changes have raised concerns about the show's success. At this year's C2E2 last week in Chicago, Jeph Loeb helped lay those fears to rest with an update on how the show has been received. Loeb had the following to say to Newsarama during an exclusive video interview... "Avengers right now on DXD. Loving the show, it's doing very well. And certainly the fan response has been unbelievable every single time a new one airs." This is very good to hear. Outside of being aware the show would be airing again around the time Thor hits theaters, there has not been much information as to how well the show itself is doing. I hope it does extremely well and sticks around for quite some time to come. I only transcribed the portion of the

Read more: <http://www.comicbookmovie.com/fansites/GulfCoastAvengers/news/?a=34076&t=Jeph+Loeb+On+iThe+Avengers+Earths+Mightiest+Heroes+i+Fan+response+has+been+unbelievable>